

JAWS Newsletter Submission Guidelines

Formatting	Times New Roman 12pt font Double-spaced Avoid footnotes and endnotes
Style	Any spelling style is acceptable so long as it is consistent within the manuscript. Japanese terms should be written in the Hepburn style of romanization.
References	Citations and Reference Lists should use Harvard referencing style (author date system) https://www.mendeley.com/guides/harvard-citation-guide
Word Limits	Tomorrow's Researchers Today : 500 words (excluding references) Research Reports : 1000 words (excluding references) Other Content : Consult with editors
Author Details	Please include your full name, affiliation, and email in the heading of your submission.
Submission method	Submit as an email attachment (Microsoft Word) to the editors at jaws.editors[AT]gmail.com .  *Please make sure to indicate your surname and the type of content being submitted in the subject line of your email. (e.g. Suzuki Tomorrow's Researchers Today; Smith Research Report).

Tomorrow's Researchers Today

Ph.D. (or exceptional M.A. and M.Phil.) students in the initial stages of their research are invited to submit a paper for this section. These papers are primarily meant to inform the community about new researchers and developing projects, rather than to provide research results. Therefore, references are not necessarily required.

Research Reports

Ph.D. students (at advanced stages of their research) and other researchers can submit a research report in order to share the results of their fieldwork and/or some reflections on their own research. Research reports should include in-text citations and a list of references.

**Other Content**

We would like to encourage other types of research output and anthropology news, such as...

- *Conference Reports
- *Workshop Reports
- *Book Reviews
- *Photo Essays
- *Announcements of new books, relevant journal articles, etc.

We are looking forward to receiving your submissions!

Jennifer M. McGuire & Melinda Papp, Co-Editors